A thorough-going Radical in Kansas City, Mo., the other night, hired a buggy, and, in company with a sooty wench, rode through the city during the evening, driving to one of the most prominent democrats after dinner, and got a drink, leaving the ebony lady to hold the ribbons. Rah for Grant!

A merchant of Springfield, Mass., has produced a velocipede which he claims is far superior to the French. In ordinary hands it will average twelve miles an hour, and on a smooth way like Boston Common can be propelled at the rate of twenty miles an hour. It can be manufactured at a much less price than the French velocipedes.

The Washington Guards, in New Orleans, [illegible] Congress, during [illegible] other [illegible] and drove off the Guards, who, in their turn, rallied and beating like demons, inserting villains and resorting to every conceivable outrage outside of cannibalism to prevent a disturbance. Reaching the vicinity of Bienville, on St. Peter street, they attacked an unoffending citizen and beat him nearly to death. They were fully armed, and more than one prevalent was threateningly displayed by the able seamanries of the Warmouth clan. There was nothing to provoke the outrageous conduct.

An unsuccessful attempt to release three convicts from the State prison at Charlestown, Mass., was made Thursday night, by Andrew J. Freeman, whose term of imprisonment for burglary recently expired. Three convicts, Hutchinson, Hall—were placed in separate parts of the prison, having purposely committed some breach of prison discipline involving punishment by confinement in cells separate from the main prison. Freeman scaled the wall with a rope ladder, and was well provided with tools to open the cell doors, but the suspicions of the jailor were aroused, and Freeman was captured, after shooting a watchman in the hand with a pistol.

A Radical Canard.

Every Radical paper in the North has copied a telegram dated "Bowling Green, Ky., September 7th," and which first appeared in the Cincinnati Commercial, announcing a series of rebel outrages upon Union men. This, like all the other lies that are manufactured for Northern consumption, was made the text for a thousand tirades. It is a shame that the Kentucky Radicals will sit silent, and thus consent to the publication of what they know to be the most gross and pernicious slanders upon their friends and neighbors. We think it is about time that some of them should speak out, if there is any honesty or true manhood among them. The Bowling Green Democrat expresses the belief that the dispatch alluded to was never sent from that place, and mak. the suggestion:

> We are not believe that any respectable member of the Radical party in this community will endorse these villainous falsehoods or approve of their publication. They are only a little far more who have no regard for truth or the principles of [illegible] community.

We think that if those more prominent Radicals who claim their own position as [illegible] posed, owe it to themselves and to the community in which they live, [illegible] to [illegible] through the columns of the Commercial and other Radical newspaper structures. Who will be manly enough to do it?

The Commercial Summary.

The attention of that very large class of readers interested in commercial matters will, no doubt, be attracted by the copious, accurate and excellent review of the transactions of the past week which appears in the Courier this morning. The feature in our paper will grow in importance and interest with each [illegible] issue.

Gen. Thos. Rousseau and the Fifth Cavalry.

Gen. Thomas Rousseau, commanding the post of [illegible], was in that city yesterday. He has, we learn, been ordered to remain, whether the wishes of his regiment (the 5th cavalry) will probably soon be seen. The regiment is at present very much scattered, one company being at Washington, two companies at Morgantown, S. C., two at Athens, Ga., one at Macon, Ga., one at Milledgeville, one at Savannah, Ga., one at Atlanta, Ga., two at Jackson, Miss., one at Vicksburg, Tenn., and one at Nashville.

It is a matter of regret that so thorough a soldier and gentleman as Gen. Rousseau is to be removed from Tennessee at this time. Through all the troubles in that unfortunate State, while he was commander of the District of Tennessee, he was ever faithful to the interests of the whole people, regardless of all personal considerations and influences, and never overstepped his duty at one time to carry favor with any party or class. We speak from personal knowledge when we say he has the respect and confidence of the people of Tennessee, in all parties, and his departure will be a loss to the State.

The Coming Maine Election—How to Interpret the Returns.

The State election of Maine will take place to-morrow, after a brief but most animated and hotly contested canvass. The Democrats of that State have been working with a zeal and hopefulness which they have not displayed for years. At the same time, the Radicals, alarmed by the falling off in their vote last year, and warned by the changes going on against them, have filled the State with their best speakers, and concentrated within it all the influences at the command of the Eastern bondholders. The disposition to attach too much importance to the significance of the Maine election is therefore wide-spread, and will probably lead to a good deal of delusive speculation.

As to the case of Vermont, a Democratic gain over last year's vote in Maine would have a mighty import, while a Radical gain of that sort would signify nothing, and might be consistent even with an actual falling off in the average local strength of the Radical party. Last year an odious liquor law, passed by the Radical Legislature, was the chief issue of the canvass, and silenced many thousand Radical voters, and transferred many to the Democratic side. Startled by the result, the Legislature has repealed that law. It would be strange if they could not now regain much of the strength they lost by the local issue, when they have made such desperate efforts and flooded the State with money from the immense corruption fund subscribed by the banks and bondholders. It is, besides, to be noted that in Maine, as in other Eastern States, every little capitalist owns a few bonds, and the bonus the Radicals offer to that class is a direct bribe for votes.

From these facts it must be inferred that a comparison of the vote now, pending the Presidential election, with the figures of the local election last year, will be very deceptive. In their desperate need for encouragement the Radical papers will make the most of their opportunity. For our own part, all the encouraging reports we have heard from Maine have only increased our admiration for the gallant Democrats who can make such a noble fight for principle when they can have no hope of carrying the State. We do not expect to carry any New England State but Connecticut, and we would remind our readers that the average vote of Maine for the last four years is the only proper basis for a comparison of the vote at the present election, and we refer them to the following figures of the Maine elections which we take from the New York World:

VOTE FOR GOVERNOR.

Item	Rep.	Rep. maj.	Total vote
1864	46,638	29,180	111,906
1865	31,809	19,622	90,696
1866	41,947	29,857	111,804
1867	48,986	37,233	110,242

VOTE FOR PRESIDENT.

Item	Rep.	Rep. maj.	Total vote
1864	67,305	20,047	114,660

From this table are deduced the average vote of each party for Governor for the last four years, together with the average vote of the State and the average Radical majority, to wit:

Average Democratic vote	41,467
Average Radical vote	67,746
Average Radical majority	26,279
Average total vote	109,213

Including the Presidential vote of 1864, the table of averages would stand thus:

Average Democratic vote	42,500
Average Radical vote	62,869
Average Radical majority	20,369
Average total vote	105,369

It is to be noted in this connection that the average Radical majority in Maine for the last four years is between twenty and twenty-one thousand, and that the Radicals last year polled nearly six thousand less than their average vote. It is also true that the Radical majority in Maine has always exceeded twenty-one thousand when a full vote was polled. To arrive at the real significance of the election this year it will be necessary to compare the Radical majority with their usual majorities in the past, and to remember that Maine is "Down East;" that the Radicals have made their best fight there, and that the Democrats, while standing up manfully for principle, had not the strength or encouragement derived from a prospect of success. Under such circumstances a reduction of the Radical majority in Maine by a thousand votes will be equivalent to a Democratic majority of 10,000 in Indiana.

The Expulsion of Negro Members from the Georgia Legislature.

The Radicals are in a rough time generally going "outside of the Constitution." It is like sailing without a rudder. They get the bow pointed in the direction they want the vessel to go, but in spite of all their efforts the unmanageable craft will move off on the wrong tack. They reconstructed Georgia, for instance, on a loyal and negro-suffrage basis. They had plenty of elbow room in which to do this work to their sore satisfaction. The Constitution was not allowed to interfere with their operations in the least. The army and all the machinery of military government, including Dry Tortugas and Mende's "swell issues," were at their disposal. They turned out a loyal State government and legislature, so called. The first thing this Legislature did was to unseat twenty-three negro members, on the ground that the new Radical State constitution made them ineligible! Under that constitution, nine dollars a day for legislation is "too good for niggers," and so the white members have delegated party—Democrats, Republicans, scalawags and carpet-bagers—all turned upon their odorous colleagues and voted them out. The Radicals took the ground that the expulsion of negroes by a State convention was a usurpation of power, and that the Legislature alone could do it. The Legislature has accordingly expelled them, and the Radicals will probably submit to the outrage. Of course, if they had been in power they would have done the same thing. They have been reconstructed on the basis of universal negro suffrage, and they will not allow a shadow of opposition to their will. They have the power, and they will use it. Their only fear is that the Democrats will not submit to the outrage, and will thus give them an excuse for [illegible] the Constitution.

Theater Third Week of Zoraster Engagement of the Celebrated Premiere Danseuse and Pantomimist, Miss Agnes Leach, in the Wonderful Transformation Scene.

On Monday night Zoraster will enter on the third week at the Louisville Theater. The week will introduce a new candidate for popular favor in the person of the celebrated dancer and Mad'lle Augusta from the great Theater Comique, Paris. Her reputation and distinguished position as one of the luminaries at Niblo's at the time the Black Crook was originally produced. Since then she has been a feature of the ballet at Wallack's Theater and in the other of the most important cities of the Union. She was the principal attraction in Hemmings's company, organized to play the Black Crook in Philadelphia and other Eastern cities, and is very pretty, very graceful, and possesses a captivating style, original and piquant. She will share the honors of dance with charming alternation, and will doubtless awaken a tempest of applause in our thunder-gusts. We are pleased to learn that the great spectacle is to remain another week on the boards. Comparatively few of our citizens have as yet seen the play of Zoraster, and none should be sufficient attraction to fill the theater for weeks. Had this piece been originally produced in New York and there (brought here, would have excited more interest, and attention. There are unfortunately too many who think that the test of excellence is a metropolitan reputation, and this class can hardly be brought to believe that our home artists are capable of appreciating the excellencies of foreign art. In this case they will be compelled to acknowledge the truth of the last scene of Zoraster was ever surpassed on any stage. This opinion we heard an amateur on Friday evening in the lobby of the theater by a gentleman who visited every theater of note on the continent of Europe. We predict a great success for the play when it is produced in the Eastern cities, where it will be in the course of the season. While it remains on our boards it should be seen by every one who has the slightest taste for the beautiful and a love for the drama.

THE MASONS.

Departure of Knights Templar for St. Louis.

A number of Knights Templar left this city yesterday for St. Louis, to attend the tri-annual conclave to be held there this week, among those be Wm. Kens, Past Grand Commander of the State of Kentucky, and the following members of Louisville Commandery, No. 1: Sir Wm. A. Way ter, Past Commander; Sir Augustus Pirtle, Eminent Commander; Sir W. C. Munger, Recorder; Sir R. H. Neal, Senior Warden; Sir Moses Terry, Junior Warden; Sir Geo. T. Evans, Generalissimo; Sir Henry Hudson, Captain of the Guard. The Semilianswonly with the exception, the Supreme Council of Southern Jurisdiction will be held to confer the thirty-third degree upon Sir Knights Wm. Warner and James Beatty, who were elected to that degree at Charleston, S. C. The New Rite Masons will hold the Lodge of Sorrow.

A large number of Masons from Nashville and the South passed through the city yesterday en route for St. Louis. It is anticipated that the gathering of Masons in St. Louis on this occasion will be the largest ever known to any one place in the United States.

Metropolitan Music Hall.

This place of amusement still continues to attract last night to witness the performances of this minstrel company. They perform well. The White Swan was played in fine style. The memories in this piece are very pleasing. The dancing, the negro character of the old plantation darkey, is immense; in fact, he excels any Ethiopian performer that has ever appeared to our city. The Gardner sisters in their duets and dances were very well, and several new stars have just arrived from the city of New York, among whom we see the names of Miss Carrie Weston, a beautiful and accomplished dancer, and the great Ethiopian delineator, Mr. Geo. C. Thompson. On Monday evening the great burlesque entitled "Young and Old Virginia" will be produced. On Wednesday, Sept. 16th, the management has tendered a complimentary benefit to Mlle Artesia, and we hope she will have a bumper, for she deserves it.

ACCIDENT ON MAIN.

A Man Knocked Down and Dragged 60 by a Street Car.

As a penalty, connected with the house of J. B. Davis & Co., liquor dealers on second street, was crossing Main street yesterday, at the intersection of Second, carrying on his shoulders a box of candles, he was struck by a Main street car and thrown under the swiftly moving wheels, which dragged him a distance of sixty feet through the mud, tearing his clothing and the flesh of his arms and side in a shocking manner, and smashing to fragments the box of candles he had been carrying. He was covered with blood and mud when he was picked up, and was found to be severely injured. The accident was attributed to the carelessness of the driver, and created considerable feeling among those who witnessed it.

A Strong Testimonial.

The following letter bears the strongest testimony to the superior merits of Bristol's Great Universal Pain Killer:

> Rappahannock Co., Sept. 7, 1868.
> Mr. T. E. C. Bromly
> Dear Sir—I have many inquiries about your pain killer, I have tried nearly all the kinds of pain killers that are in use, and I have found yours the best, and have handed them out with good success, and I have used it myself for rheumatism, and have found it to be the best I ever used. I have also used it for my children for colic, and have found it to be the best I ever used. I have been a traveling agent for three years, and have sold a great many bottles of pain killer, and I have never had one to return it to me, but they all say it is the best they ever used. I have also used it for my horses, and have found it to be the best I ever used. I have also used it for my horses, and have found it to be the best I ever used. I have also used it for my horses, and have found it to be the best I ever used.
> Yours truly, R. H. MURPHY.

☞ The attention of the readers of the Courier is directed to the advertisement of Mr. J. L. Hopper, of this city, which appears in another column. Mr. Hopper is now in receipt of his new stock of carpeting, furnishing goods, clothing, cassimeres and vestings, which he will sell at most extraordinarily low prices. Those in want of anything in his line will find it to their interest to call on him.

Forepaugh's Ladies Saloon.

Mr. August Forepaugh has been fortunate enough to secure rooms in the splendid new block of Bomberger & Bloom, No. 139 Fourth street, the site of the theatrical Barnes-tenant, and has fitted them up in the most elegant manner for a ladies' dining saloon and restaurant. Forepaugh is famous for his delicious teas, cool drinks, and the peerless of the city.

The Catechism of Hate.

It is very hard to please the Radicals. When everybody thought the war was over, and the entire South had laid down their arms and come to work to earn an honest livelihood, the Radicals raised the cry that they were all a set of rebels, obstinate in the extreme, and set firmly refusing to "harmonize." They insisted that, as a proof of their readiness to accept the facts of the war, the "rebels" must repudiate their debt and abolish slavery by State legislation. Well, the South did what was asked of them, and furnished the requisite proof of their disposition to "harmonize." But no sooner was this done than the Radicals raised a simultaneous howl to the effect that the rebels were a set of silk-hypocrites, unworthy the association of the Saints of Faneuil Hall and Plymouth Rock. Gen. Grant, it is true, who was not at that time a saint, insisted that the Southern people were sincere, that they desired peace, and were earnest in their purpose to accept the issues of the war, and to resume their relations as law-abiding States of the Federal Union.

But, notwithstanding this high authority, the Radicals passed their military bills, established their Freedmen's Bureau, set up their intrigues over the States of the Union, organized their military commissions, and called the negro above the white man, filled their bastiles with numerous innocent victims, and gauged and bit and bayoneted and tomahawked citizens for imaginary offences, and swore they would continue this fraternal or parental treatment until the whole South evinced a disposition to "harmonize." Well, this may have been a very good way to bring about the desired "harmony," but it was rather a novel one. It took the Southern people a long while to discover the benedecent designs of Radicalism "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth"; and the Radicals, who claim to be his vicegerents upon earth, manifest their love by the oppressions. Measured by this standard, they dost upon the Southern people! They love them to distraction, and chastise them accordingly! It would have been the extreme of dullness in the South not to be sensible of such manifestations of Radical love, and the height of ingratitude not to show evidences of "spaniel fawning."

Accordingly, the South determined to show still further evidences of a disposition to "harmonize." With their hearts in their hands, and with truth on their lips, her representative men met in the representative Democracy of the North in convention in New York. Simultaneous with the meeting of this convention, there was an assemblage of tried soldiers and sailors of the Union army and navy who had periled life for the preservation of the Union. Many such patriots were also members of the Democratic Convention. They had all fought for the Constitution, and meant that it should be preserved. They recognized the fact that the war was over, and that to keep alive the wild passions that hate engenders is not a means of securing peace, of giving strength and unity to the country. With the close of war, they desired the close of all bitterness, the healing of all wounds, the burying of all animosities, that the children of a common country, who

"Dr'dfully meet in the intestine shock
And furious close of civil butchery, should now, in mutual well-becoming ranks, march all one way, and emulate a noble spirit against acquaintance, kindred and allies."

It was in this spirit they met the representative men of the South, and the patriotic feeling was echoed by every Southern heart. History affords no example of patriotism more sublime than this. The convention was not a representative of factions gathered together to advocate the claims of a Cesar or a Pompey to rule as a master over a degraded people. It was not an assemblage which had met to fawn at the feet of insolent power and beg for the privilege of living as the slaves of a military despot, controlled by a triumvirate who build their powers upon the ruins of the Constitution. But it was an assemblage of patriots, determined to bury every selfish feeling, of men who, on different sides of a prolonged controversy, had evinced their sincerity by imperilling life and honor in support of their principles, of men who had fought out their quarrel to a practical conclusion; of men who were resolved to accept issues which had been settled by an open contest between them in past years, and to meet with a united front the new danger which threatened the overthrow of all that was left them of civil liberty; of men resolved to merge every other sentiment into one sublime effort to preserve for their posterity the blessings of constitutional government.

But to expect such elevated patriotism to receive the admiration of the Radical leaders, is to expect pearls to excite the admiration of swine. As much may we expect the followers of Satan to commend the concord that reigns in Heaven, as expect the Radicals to appreciate the union of every patriotic element in support of the harmonies of constitutional government. Every hatred and malice, and all unrighteousness seem the basis of their policy, and eternal strife and contention the elements in which they live. They seem incapable of appreciating the conduct of men who, having honestly fought for what they believed to be right, can honestly forgive those whom they fought. With them all quarrels must be interminable, and malice must not bath the dart which hatred drives at their foe. If their arguments be just, no true patriot can ever belong to their party, for they claim as a prerequisite to admission, a confession that the sentiment fought for the present objects of Radicalism. If a Northern soldier claims that he fought solely for the Constitution and the flag of his country, he is, in Radical parlance, a "copperhead." If a Southern soldier gives his adhesion to the Constitution and the flag, but claims that he honestly fought for what he believed were his rights, he is pronounced a "rebel," and until he confesses himself a hypocrite or a knave he is deemed unworthy of association with the party of "great moral ideas."

Thus, a Union soldier who can believe in the honesty and honesty of the man who imperilled life and fortune through the long years of a disastrous war is no more to be tolerated by the Radicals than a Southern soldier who does not confess that his past life was a sham, that his principles were a mere pretext, and that he was himself by profession a hypocrite, a knave and a cheat! To make the slightest pretensions to honesty of purpose is thus the surest way of attracting Radical contempt and condemnation from the Radical party!

It is sad to see a great party animated by such sentiments, to see them attempting to blow into a consuming flame the dying embers of discord which have too long distracted our afflicted country. To attain this end every generous feeling exhibited by those who were formerly opposed to each other, every attempt at conciliation and harmony, is lauched to scorn. Federal and Confederate soldier, actuated by the most unselfish feelings of patriotism, who would leave the past behind them who would pour the healing balm of oblivion into the gaping wounds of the country, who would unite all, without reference to past issues, in support of a common country and a common constitution, are scoffed at and derided.

As an illustration of this, we may point to a recent Radical "declaration" signed to implant in Radical breasts a spirit of hatred against all Federal and Confederate soldiers alike, done to secure the peace of the country. It would dam them to rage against each other the eternal war which the Radicals seem determined to establish as their perpetual policy. In one breath the Radicals say "peace," and in the next they scoff at concord and harmony and friendship and all the accompaniments of peace. Bayonets and bastiles, and other engines of despotism, constitute the stalwart ship of Radicalism, which sits like a fiend over the ruins which its malice has wrought, and, in its hatred of all that is good, mocks at every noble and generous and patriotic purpose which would restore the shattered fabric of constitutional liberty to its pristine beauty and glory.

[ad] The Bourbon Democrat has been removed to Cynthiana, and has reappeared as the "Harrison Democrat," under the management of Col. R. P. Cunningham, its former editor, assisted by C. W. West, Esq. The first number is a handsome and well-filled sheet. As an able and sound Democratic journal, side awake for news, it deserves and will doubtless receive a liberal support in the rich Democratic county of Harrison.

Very Like Grown Folks.

Three little girls, aged from four to six, "went calling" at Springfield, Mass., a few days ago. Reigning an imaginary door bell at the foot of a tree, which they played was the residence of one of the ladies on their "list," and assuming themselves to have been admitted to that individual, the eldest of the callers did up the conversation after this fashion: "Oh, how do you do? O um, it's a beautiful day! How's Hattie? It is very lonesome down at our house, and I'd like to have Hattie come and stay with me. My husband has to go to his work at three o'clock every morning; and, besides, he's taken a trunk to sleep on lately, and I lammer him in it. And the spirits are getting cold now, you know, and I'd like to have Hattie come and stay all night. There! I see my husband coming, and I'll have to say good afternoon. Now, if you don't return this call soon, I shall be very unhappy. O dear! he's almost home, and the irons is all locked up and everything;" and the little lady skipped away to meet the four years gentleman who had lately been indulging that reprehensible "freak."

[ad] A lively youngster in Hartford, Conn., to avoid the police, jumped into the river, and when chased in a boat, dived under the whitehalled officers and got away. He soon afterwards arrested an idler, but his friends broke the officers' hands and rescued him. Then he stripped and took to the river again, but was caught by the hair as he attempted his diving trick, and marched through the city stark naked.

Andrews, No. 140 Market street, I would say to my old friends and customers that they will find the stock at Mr. Andrews, in charge of my old partner, Mr. Ben. G. SALE POSTPONED.—The sale of lots on Breckinridge and Jackson streets, to Pearson, Meddis & Ferguson, was postponed on account of the weather till Monday, September 28th, at three o'clock P. M.

[ad] That desirable house and lot, the residence of J. C. McFerran, Esq., situated on Chestnut street between Third and Fourth, will be sold at auction next Tuesday afternoon by Morris, Southwick & Co.

[ad] All of the studies comprising a thorough business course taught separately or in connection at the night session of the Bryant & Stratton Business College, commencing Monday night, September 14.

[ad] There are many homes which might be made more cheerful and pleasant to the inmates by the introduction of a musical instrument, suited to the capacity of some of the household, which would infuse a new joy into the blessings of their abode. Possibly, there may be one or two who possess a hidden talent for the divine art, which only needs encouragement to be developed into such perfection that others may derive much pleasure, besides the actual benefit which the player still derive. To such, the American Organs, manufactured by Messrs. S. D. & H. W. Smith, Boston, Mass., who are represented in the South and Southwest by D. F. Faulds, of this city, are particularly adapted. Not only do they give the nearest resemblance to the pipe organ in quality of tone, but their delicacy of action renders them agreeable to the intellectually toned in the performance of light and cheerful music.

[ad] Mechanics or others wishing to purchase a small and cheap residence, must be sure to attend the sale on Washington street, between Jackson and Hancock, on Monday evening at 5 o'clock, by Pearson, Meddis & Ferguson.

[ad] A ladies' writing class will be organized for the night sessions of the Bryant & Stratton Business College. This is a rare opportunity, and will, no doubt, be well improved.

[ad] Why the people go here, the photographs they get are the best in this or any other city, and at the lowest prices. Third phot graphs only $2 per dozen. Remember J. F. Reed is the oldest photographer in the city, and has the largest establishment in the South. Gallery on Main street, below Fourth, No. 148. He glances everybody and their babies.

[ad] We will sell this evening, at four o'clock, some very desirable lots on Breckinridge and on Hancock. No part of Louisville south of Broadway is more densely improved than the locality, and property in the neighborhood rents for a greater per cent upon its cost than any other. Persons seeking investment, and those wishing to buy cheap property on which to erect small houses, will do well to attend this sale.

PEARSON, MEDDIS & FERGUSON.

HIGH TAXES A HINT. The City Tax Receiver, wishes us to say to tax-payers that on and after the 1st of October a percentage will be added to all bills then in his hands, and as taxes are high enough without any addition it would be well for all to pay before said date, and to avoid being crowded to call forth with.

THE SEPTEMBER IS OVER. As the meager leaves bowed to the main shrub of the field, so the whole brood of imitation and counterfeit cologne have bowed to the sovereign perfume of the day—Phalon's "Night-blooming Cereus." They have given up edition, where they belong. Block Island Union.

[ad] Night sessions of the Bryant & Stratton Business College commence September 14th. Special advantages offered. Secretary.

THE SEPTEMBER SESSION.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—If the wishes of a majority of the Radical members of Congress are carried out, Congress will be called together this month. There are about sixteen members here now, and without an exception they want a meeting, but, to take another recess and probably to meet again after the October elections, if any party exigency shall require it. From present appearances it is most likely that Congress will meet on the 21st.

THE TENNESSEE DELEGATION

are apparently pleased with the President's orders to furnish Federal troops to maintain order in that State; nevertheless they are suspicious of the Executive, and declare that, if the troops shall be called into service.
